Russian Spies Trained

CAPITAL REPORT: BY FULTON LEWIS, JR.

WASHINGTON, October 10—Uncle Sam will pay the lion's share of a new program in a Moscow school designed to train Soviet nationals for top-ranking United Nations jobs.

Connecticut's Tom Dodd brought the matter to the attention of his colleagues in a blistering Senate speech the other day. He disclosed that U.S. taxpayers will pay $64,424 over a two-year period to operate the school, a brainchild of Secretary General U Thant.

The disclosure came a few days after newspapers carried the news that two members of the Soviet Union's UN delegation had been caught red-handed while receiving secret documents from a U.S. seaman.

Only two weeks earlier it was revealed that two Soviet employees of the UN Secretariat, caught spying against the United States, had returned to Russia.

DEMOCRAT DODD, the Senate's premier anti-Communist, points to a long history of espionage by Soviet employees of the United Nations. He says the American taxpayer will now foot the bill for training 22 prospective Soviet spies.

Sen. Dodd points to the words of J. Edgar Hoover:

"These (Soviet diplomats) guests of the United States are supposedly dedicated to the cause of international peace but they are, in fact, carefully selected envoys of the international Communist conspiracy, trained in trickery and deceit and dedicated to the concept of fully exploiting the freedoms of the countries they seek to destroy. It is too much to expect that they would not prostitute the United Nations."

A typical diplomat, Konstantin Pavlovich Ekimov, arranged for the kidnapping in 1956 of an infant daughter born in this country to a Russian refugee. The child was whisked away to Russia, and Ekimov followed, declared persona non grata by the United States.

Kirill Sergeevich Doronkin came to the United States in 1956 to serve as Film Editor, Radio and Visual Division of the Department of Public Information, UN Secretariat.

In October, 1956, special agents of the FBI observed a clandestine meeting in which Doronkin obtained from an American citizen serial photographs of the Chicago area. U.S. officials asked that Doronkin be fired from his UN post, but he was allowed to stay on until the termination of duty, in March, 1959.

Vadim Aleksandrovich Kirilyuk arrived on these shores in September, 1958. He served as a Political Affairs Officer in the Secretariat's Trusteeship Department. He left in January, 1960 after he had been discovered trying to purchase secret information about American cryptographic machines. The FBI reports, too, that Kirilyuk tried to recruit an American citizen into the Soviet espionage apparatus.

VLADIMAR ARSENEVICH Grusha was formerly assigned as First Secretary of the Soviet Union's UN Delegation. He was declared persona non grata after he received top-secret information stolen from the Ceylonese delegation.

Igor Melekh, a Soviet national, worked for the UN Secretariat. He was sent back to the Soviet Union in April, 1961 after enlisting an American citizen in Soviet espionage activities.

Boris Fedorovich Gladkov entered the United States in December, 1953, left in July, 1958. While here he paid an American sales engineer $1,500 for information on marine boilers.

With Uncle Sam paying their way, there will be a few more Soviet "diplomats" coming to the United States to serve the cause of world peace.
